SAKÉ SELECTION

Sake is an alcoholic drink made from fermented rice. The foundations of good sake are quality rice, clean water, koji mold and yeast. They are combined and fermented in precise processes that have been refined over the centuries. Similar to wine, sake comes in a range of flavors that vary in complexity and nuance. At the most basic level, sake is described as either sweet (ama-kuchi) or dry (kara-kuchi). Sake is also served at a variety of temperatures depending on the sake, season and individual taste. As interest in Asian cuisine has grown internationally, sake has started to become a trendy and recognizable drink around the world.

RUM SELECTION

Rum lovers around the world owe a great debt to a simple plant: Sugar Cane. Rum is made from pure Sugarcane, in a process that is partly science and mostly art. Most of the rare distilleries still in activity cultivate its own sugarcane. They are carefully selected and grown exclusively for the production of the rums: here lies the first secret of its quality. The color of the spirit is primarily determined by the amount of time it has spent aging in oak barrels. The longer it's been aged, the more color and flavor it picks up from the wood. As long as the angles are watching our rums, we have all our time...

WHISKY SELECTION

You might be wondering what the difference is between whiskey and whisky or bourbon or scotch. The type of whisky or whiskey is determined by the grain use in the distillation process, Different grains produce different taste characteristics... Bourbon is a type of American whiskey made from corn. Another determinant is where it is produced - Whiskey from Ireland and U.S is usually spelled with the «e» contrary to whisky from Scotland, Canada, Japan and else-where which are spelled without «e». Couple that with varying distillation methods by country, region and producer, and you get a wide range of flavors from sweet to spicy and from smooth to bold and smokey.

GIN SELECTION

Gin is a liquor made from grain that has been infused with Juniper berries and other botanicals. Juniper berries, bluish berries with a piney flavor and aroma, are the predominant flavoring for all gin. The combination of botanicals, along with the production method, is what distinguishes one brand of gin from another. As its name indicates, dry gin is not sweet. It is usually aromatic and light in flavor and body.
